Hy-Line to play big role in U.S. energy evolution

March 27, 2011

I'm heartened by your paper's coverage of Cape Wind's partnership with Hy-Line Cruises. The planned ecotours of Horseshoe Shoal are one more example of how America's first offshore wind farm will create new jobs and revenue streams for Massachusetts. And this is great news!

When visitors approach the majestic seascape that will be Cape Wind, their perspective on how our nation "mines" energy is bound to change. This, too, is great news!

Having toured Cape Wind by boat, and later returning to Hyannis Harbor, the ecotours will offer visitors much more than a day on the water. Journeying to Cape Wind and back to Hyannis, the navigational course will literally connect two important energy dots — the people and properties that demand electricity and the innovative offshore technology that will provide it.

On that line to and from Cape Wind, the simplicity and smarts of clean, renewable power will become intimately evident. Having discovered that nearly all the electricity required by Cape Cod will be supplied by nonpolluting technology, many seafarers may ask themselves, "Why not where I live, too?" Hy-Line Cruises will become a major player in communicating the next chapter in America's energy evolution!
